GOOD NEWS FOR HOMEMAKERS
By Shirley W. Walton Extension Agent
Food Shopping - 1776 Style

In keeping with a popular fantasy during this Bicentennial Year; imagine it is 1776 and you are shopping for food supplies in the bustling city of Philadelphia. You buy in volume - - in gallons, barrels and hundred pounds. The reason: You don't get to the store so often and - - convenience food being in the future - - you make all your recipes from scratch.

You note that flour is up to 9 shillings and 4 pence per 100 pounds and sugar demands 21.90 shillings a 100 pounds. That other favorite sweetner, molasses, costs 1.05 shillings a gallon. A barrel of beef (about 100 pounds), salted and brined, has climed to 34.33 shilings and a like amount of pork, similarly treated sells for 39.07 shillings. A gallon of rum is 1.84 shillings. You consider butter at 5 shillings a pound, but might heed the merchant's advice that the price is "excessive" and that the "buyer look elsewhere."

You will try to stretch your shillings because you know they are hard to come by. Common leaborers make 3 shillings a day. Carpenters, along with joiners and riggers of the shipbuilding trade, earn 5 shillings a day. A tailor receives 3 shillings plus room and board for making a suit, whether it takes a day or a week to do the job.

A workday is 12 hours long - - with no coffee break - - and a week's work is 6 days. Another way to look at it: a skilled laborer works 3 hours to buy a gallon of molasses, 8 days and 5 hours to carry home a 100 pound barrel of beef, 1 day and 3 hours for a pound of butter, and 6 hours for a gallon of rum.

For a rough comparison, in 1976 terms, a shilling was about 25 cents and a pence, 2 cents.

Were those days really the "good ole days" when it came to food shopping?
